

The Return on the Software Testing Investment

Testing is an important investment. Organizations forego expenditures in development, support, and other initiatives to check for bugs and make sure systems will work before deploying or shipping the software. What's the return on that investment? How can we measure the return? These are questions management will ask, and the smart test professional will be ready with answers. Listen to this webinar and be ready.